Welcome to the new school year to all Latymer students and parents! As ever, we are always happy to meet with students either in person or remotely whenever support is needed.

The Head of Careers, Chris Couch, can be contacted on crc@latymer-upper.org and the Careers Coordinator, Sally Greene, can be contacted on scg@latymer-upper.org.

Careers Talks

As we are not currently able to run our usual lunchtime Careers Talks programme in school, we are looking at ways to deliver the programme remotely. We hope to offer pre-recorded and live talks covering a wide range of sectors from technology, TV production, finance and journalism over the next few months so watch this space! Any parent wanting to support us with this, please email scg@latymer-upper.org.

Careers Education

Skills Building – this is the perfect time to look at building skills in new areas to improve employability, personal development and, most importantly, for fun. There are lots of different websites offering online courses - Udemy is one of the world’s biggest online course providers and although you have to pay to access the courses, they are currently offering a student deal. Courses cover a huge range of topics including business, communications, game design, music production, health and fitness and IT.

Virtual Interviews – Using online platforms for a wide range of activities has now become common place. This is no more true than in the world of recruitment where virtual interviews with job applicants was already a key part of many admissions processes.

Global recruitment site Glassdoor has put together some invaluable tips for anyone having an online interview, whether it be for a job or higher education place. Click here to access more information.

Medical School Applications - Students considering doing a medical school application this year will be well aware of the restrictions placed on them to gain work experience due to the covid pandemic.

The Medical Schools Council has published this guidance for students in this position. A key takeaway from this is that prospective medical students need to be keeping abreast on how healthcare professionals are dealing with the pandemic and write a reflective diary about what is happening at the moment. Look at news websites, talk to anyone currently working in the NHS, seek out volunteering if possible but above all, demonstrate how much you’ve learnt about effective healthcare.

Oxford vs Cambridge - Thinking of applying to Oxford or Cambridge?

This article from the Complete University Guide will help you explore the similarities and differences between each university.
UCAS continues to provide a wide range of online support for students looking to apply to university. As well as providing a hub for all university virtual Open Days, they are now hosting virtual exhibitions for the following subjects:

Business, law, and finance – 30 September

Biological and physical sciences – 16 October

Social sciences, humanities, and teaching – 23 - 24 October

Maths, engineering, and computing – 2 - 3 November

Creative subjects – 13 - 14 November

These events will give students the change to chat online to teachers and university students about what it’s like to study specific subjects for degree, advice on writing Personal Statements and general information relating to each subject area.

Not going to uni?? – University might not be the right route for you after school or you might just want to take a Gap Year to decide. Whatever your reason for taking a break in your studies, the Careermapping website has published an article offering some useful suggestions for alternative opportunities. Click here to read.
